LOOK GOOD, DO GOOD

Look good, do good is not just a catchy phrase, it is my way of life. Growing up in Israel, to a Dutch father and English mother, I learned early the answers to many of the challenges facing the world lie in promoting true cross-cultural understanding. I now know that our biggest challenges can be overcome if we sincerely make the effort to know and understand each other.

I have lived in New York for most of my life (since 1983) and this great, one-of-a-kind city has truly inspired me in my search to find a way to combine jewelry design with a message of understanding and compassion. The message I try to deliver to the world in everything I do is that of the beauty we can find in each other. My jewelry celebrates the diversity of humanity and provides me with the opportunity to share my vision with the world. In my jewelry design, as well as in my daily life, I look for ways to allow people to Look Good and to Do Good. I not only do this through the element of design, but also by giving away a portion of my proceeds to charitable organizations that promote understanding and compassion.
